Accessories

Beading
Creates a border between the floor and adjoining walls. They are used when removing an existing skirting is not possible or if one does not need a very high skirting.

Skirting
Skirting adds the final touch to wood floors. It provides finish to the floors by cladding the lower part of the adjoining walls.

Reducer Mouldings
Reducer mouldings are used to create a smooth transition between floors of different heights. For example, where wooden floors meets other flooring materials like marble floor or fitted carpet.

T-Mouldings
It is a type of moulding used in the transition between floors of the same height, where two rooms with identical flooring meet at a doorway. For example, hallways or bedrooms.

End Mouldings
Most useful when the wood floor meets an immovable object such as a door casing. It can also be used to cover the gap between the wooden floor and the wall or the window.

Stair Noses
Covers the open edges of the floor plans and provides a seamless transition between the horizontal and vertical sections of the staircase
